Watering bylaw divides Peninsula Councils

Kevin Woodley

Peninsula News Review

Regional efforts to step up watering restrictions are being met with a mixed reaction on the Peninsula.

The proposed Capital Regional District (CRD) bylaw amendment, which will limit residential sprinkling to twice a week from June 1 through September 30, received support from both the Central and North Saanich municipalities, but none appears to be coming from the town of Sidney.

Sidney councillor Peter Wainwright questioned the need for change, saying the unusually long dry spell last year drew down the levels of the reservoirs to the point where there were some serious problems developing; he suggested that it was then that the water restrictions should have been invoked.

"Now they've come up with a mathematical model to include in the bylaw - [the regulations] used to be clear. Now they're telling us to comply on vague terms," he said.

Last summer, despite hot, dry weather that lasted well into September and October, water storage volumes remained above the minimum required to implement watering restrictions under the existing bylaw. But according to Jack Hull, the regional water supply general manager, there were problems with decreasing water quality.

"The main reason (for the amendment) is the 1998 draw on the reservoir caused water quality problems," said Hull. "Wind and waves on the lowered reservoir caused higher turbidity levels. To achieve

A cross to bear

Parishioners from St. Stephen's Church took turns holsting a cross to their shoulder and carrying it across the district as part of their Easter Sunday observances. The group took time at several stops along the way to mark the Stations of the Cross, giving the time-honored story a personal meaning. The walk, which was about seven miles in length, ended with a joint ceremony with parishioners at St. Elizabeth's Church in Sidney.

Libraries poised for strike April 13

Libraries across Vancouver Island could be closed as of April 13.

Contract talks between Vancouver Island Regional Library board members and CUPE Local 401 broke off last week, and resulted in 72-hour strike notice being served by CUPE and 72-hour lock-out notice being served by VIRL.

Unless there is a proposal on the table by noon on April 12, the union will take job action on April 13.

Chuck White, president for Local 401, said the main issue is job security.

"We're asking, if work is to be contracted out, that they don't lay us off to do that," he said, adding that job security has been eroded over the past few years.

"We were also very upset to have the board announce they had found surpluses in the budget — after they had laid us off."

White said money was not an issue. The opening position the union put on the table was 1/2 per cent (or about 14 cents) per hour for 1998, 1 1/2 per cent for 1999 and 1 1/2 per cent for 2000.

Peter Wainwright, chair for the VIRL board, said he was not prepared to talk about the issues, except to say "the board has been negotiating in good faith, and will continue to negotiate in good faith. We are also aware of our mandate to serve the taxpayers' interest, and we are interested in being fair with our employees."

The union has been working without a contract since June.

Community the key to rebuilding waterways on the Peninsula

FEW OF TODAY'S RESIDENTS REALIZE THE SIGNIFICANT ROLE THE PENINSULA ONCE PLAYED IN SALMON SPAWNING BECAUSE FEW RESIDENTS WERE HERE WHEN THOSE HABITATS EXISTED. OVER THE NEXT SEVERAL WEEKS, THE PENINSULA NEWS REVIEW WILL TAKE A LOOK AT SEVERAL ONGOING PROJECTS TO RESTORE THESE HABITATS, HOW THE COMMUNITY HAS ALREADY GOTTEN INVOLVED AND WHAT STILL NEEDS TO BE DONE.

Kevin Woodley

Peninsula News Review

While it's probably a slight generalization to say most residents are only vaguely aware of the existence of several major creeks on the Peninsula, it's still a safe bet that most are unaware of the significance of these waterways.

Listening to Chris Parks, the historical significance becomes quickly clear.

Parks is one of two project coordinators working on the Saanich Peninsula to restore Wsikum, Tenten and Hagan Creeks to their former levels as Salmon Habitats. He paints verbal pictures of the coho, chum and cutthroat trout runs that existed in these creeks since the last ice age some 10,000 years ago and explains how the creeks supported the spawning and rearing activities of the fish.

And then, in one quick sentence, he explains how the cycle stopped.

"Someone turned Wsikum into a ditch."

Parks says it happened sometime in the mid-1950s and was simply a matter of removing water from the area's lands as fast as possible. The easy answer was to straighten and flatten Wsikum Creek - to turn it into one big drainage ditch.

"In a matter of days, that 10,000 year cycle was stopped," says Parks, referring to the annual return of chum salmon to the Wsikum creek. "Every year for 10,000 years the fish came back. Now, for the last 50 years there have been no fish returning."

Since the big "ditch-digging" there have been sporadic reports of fish in the creek, but nothing that resembled a self-sustaining population, but that may soon change. Sometime in the next three weeks, Parks will introduce 40,000 chum fry into Wsikum.

The fry come from the volunteer enhancement society at the Goldstream hatchery. They represent a big, largely symbolic, step in a two-year-old project to rebuild the Peninsula's creeks.

"We will see fish return four years from now and hopefully by then we'll have enough habitat for them to spawn in," says Parks.

The fry also represent a tiny, step towards achieving

From here to there

The Tenten Creek (also called Airport Creek because it is located on the Victoria Airport lands) was reduced to the role of drainage ditch sometime in the mid-1950s. With the help of several partners, the Wsikum and Tenten Creeks Stewardship Project and the Hagan Creek/Kennes Watershed Project, have started several creeks on the long road to recovery.

the project's lifelong goals of long-term habitat restoration and salmon enhancement.

Most importantly, Parks hopes they represent a new beginning for Wsikum Creek.

The Wsikum and Tenten (Airport) Creek projects aren't the only habitat restoration projects currently taking place on the Peninsula. They aren't even the first.

Parks shares his office space at the Institute of Ocean Sciences with Misty MacDuffee, who, as project coordinator on the restoration of Hagan Creek in Central Saanich, started the long road toward watershed stewardship on the Peninsula over two years ago.

For generations, members of the Tsartlip band had fished the creek for cutthroat trout at a small pond on Woodwynn Farm. In recent years they reported fewer and smaller trout in the waterway.

Using the decreasing levels of cutthroat trout as an indicator, it became clear it was time to do something about the creek's ability to function as a habitat. MacDuffee was hired and the project got under way.

Parks came on board to coordinate the rebuilding of Wsikum and Tenten shortly after completing a co-op work term at the Institute of Ocean Sciences (IOS). After he was turned down for his original grant request in 1997, he put in volunteer hours and found little bits of funding here and there to keep the project alive. In 1998 his second proposal netted him a grant from the Habitat Restoration and Salmonid Enhancement Program to start the project.

The first step was to come up with a mandate. Parks looked to MacDuffee's project for guidance and came up with two keys to success.

The first was to take a watershed approach - it wasn't enough to rebuild the creek if the areas that feed water into it continue to deteriorate. The second and, according to Parks, most important step was to ensure the project was community directed.

"It would be tempting for Misty (MacDuffee) and I to go to Joe Farmer and say 'what the hell are you doing?'" says Parks. "But we as a society have made conscious choices to have local production of food and dairy products; to develop residential areas here. Our goal is to work in cooperation with the users of the watershed so they can achieve their goals and we can work towards a healthy creek."

Raising awareness will be a major factor towards long-term stabilization of the creeks and both Parks and MacDuffee have used open house events, public meetings and steering committees to increase local involvement. Signs for the Wsikum and Tenten Creek project are placed at creek crossings along West Saanich Road and feature hand-carved artwork on Red Cedar created by Tseycum band member Ron Sager.

A small, permanent display will also be placed at the Victoria Airport sometime in the middle of May.

"There's not a lot of awareness that these streams exist," says Parks. "If you don't know it's there, it can be hard to see why you should act as a steward."

Achieving community involvement has been made a little easier by the projects' numerous committed and diverse partnerships.

Leading the way were the Tseycum and Tsartlip bands. Tseycum Chief Vern Jacks spearheaded the Wsikum and Tenten Creeks Project.

Jacks, who noticed the disappearance of salmon in both streams, teamed with Hydroxyl Systems Inc. and the IOS to establish technical and scientific input, then began assembling other partners.

To date that list includes organizations from the federal, provincial and municipal governments, the Victoria Airport Authority, World Fisheries Trust, the University of Victoria and Woodwynn Farm.

Together, these groups have constructed and are now implementing a philosophy to work through consensus to achieve practical, incremental improvement to salmonid habitat through stewardship, rehabilitation and restoration activities.

To date, 110 meters of Wsikum Creek's 2 kilometer length has been rebuilt.

"This is just a drop in the bucket," says Parks. "This is a long term process and we've got a long way to go."

Residential watering days will depend on address

reduced demand we came up with the amended bylaw proposal."

In Central Saanich the amendment received strong support – surprising considering the municipality is the last in the CRD to hold out against the existing water use bylaw.

"Before, we were a customer of regional water, now we are a member," said Coun. Andrew Harcombe. "We should come on-line with other municipalities."

North Saanich joined Central Saanich in voting to support the proposed amendment in principle and directed staff to draft a bylaw that suits the needs of the district.

Under the amended bylaw, watering during summer months will be controlled by address numbers. Even-numbered addresses will be permitted to water on Wednesdays and Saturdays, while odd-numbered addresses can water on Thursdays and Sundays. All watering will be restricted to the hours of 4 a.m. through 9 a.m. in the morning and from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the evening.

New plantings, new lawns or newly-fertilized areas could be watered as necessary for the first 24 hours after planting and hand-watering could take place without restriction. Farmers remain exempt for all commercial uses, but for others the penalties for watering violations will range from a minimum fine of $50 to a maximum fine of $250.

In the outlining documents submitted to area councils, the water district pointed the recent success of similar programs in the Greater Vancouver Regional District.

"Other communities across Canada have also used this approach," states the report. "Initial resistance usually disappears when residents realize that healthy lawns can be maintained with less watering."

As a minimum standard of the new bylaw, evaluation of restriction criteria will take place on the first business day of every month. If, during the mandatory twice a week restriction period, reservoir levels are below preset levels, the water district has the power to enforce two additional stages of watering restrictions.

Stage One is the mandatory watering limits from June 1 through September 30. Stage Two reduces watering to once per week and prohibits the hosing of sidewalks and driveways. It also restricts the washing of cars unless the hose being used is equipped with a spring-loaded, hand-operated shut off device.

Stage Three calls for a complete ban on watering. It includes any watering of lawns at any time, washing building surfaces, parking lots or driveways, using decorative fountains or filling existing residential pools or wading pools.

Under the proposed changes, the minimum acceptable storage volumes in the Sooke and Goldstream Reservoirs be set at 4 billion gallons and 1 billion gallons respectively.

Implementation of subsequent stages would be based on 80 per cent probability of having more than the minimum acceptable storage volume in the reservoirs.

Probability would be determined by using the department's model which takes into consideration precipitation, reservoir levels, demand and historic records.

After determining the applicable stage, the water commission provides each Municipal Clerk with written notice that a reduction in water use is necessary. The district Clerks must then relay that information to the public.

"It's a local bylaw, so local municipalities are in charge of enforcement," said Hull.

There was concern around each council table that the regulations would be difficult to enforce, especially given current financial constraints faced by all municipalities in B.C.

"We'll wait and see if there are en-

Water bylaws in the region

History

The region's first outdoor water use bylaw was approved in February 1994 by the Administration Board of the Greater Victoria Water District and was adopted by all municipalities except Central Saanich.

That original bylaw had three stages of restrictions:

- Stage One was voluntary.
- Stage Two was mandatory and restricted watering to one day a week based on the last digit of the street address.
- Stage Three was a complete ban on outdoor sprinkling.

The implementation of these restrictions was based on predetermined minimum storage levels in the Goldstream and Sooke Reservoirs.

In 1995, Stages One and Two were implemented and analysis of Stage One (voluntary) revealed that it was ineffective in reducing water demand.

In 1996 a proposed revision to the bylaw that included changing Stage One restrictions from voluntary to mandatory twice-a-week limits was rejected by local municipalities. The Stage One restrictions would have been effective from June 1 through to September 30 each year.

In 1998, despite a long, dry summer, water levels remained above the minimum but were still low enough to cause water quality problems in the CRD.

forcement problems and if so, we'll have to address it next year," said Hull. "Generally, others have found that infractions are usually just a lack of awareness and once it's pointed out to people, there isn't a problem."

Each council's decisions regarding the bylaw changes will be passed on to the CRD Water department by April 8, 1999.

The future for seniors' housing

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Housing is an issue. That was proven by the overwhelming response to a forum on Seniors Housing held on Wednesday by the Town of Sidney's Advisory Committee for Persons with Disabilities and the Victoria Gerontology Association.

More than 70 people packed the Sidney Fire Hall meeting room to hear a panel of speakers outline the options for seniors housing on the Peninsula.

While availability of some of the options falls behind the demand, there is an almost dizzying variety.

Some include health care and other personal services to residents, others do not. Some require that, once a person is no longer able to go into the dining room for the communal meals, or if they have mental or physical conditions that require special care, they must then look for new accommodation.

This forum dealt not with health care options, but with housing for more active seniors, and with affordable housing options. Shirley Marcetta, Birch Builders and Victoria Gerontology Association member, in her presentation, outlined the retirement housing options. Those include:

CONGREGATE HOUSING (Congregate care) — multi-unit housing with self-contained apartments, some of which offer meals, housekeeping laundry, transportation, social and recreational activities. In Sidney, Norgarden, The Beechwood, Rose Bank Gardens Care-a-Minium are examples.

LIFE LEASE — offers independent living with no guaranteed programs. Residents buy occupancy rights with services such as meals and housekeeping (for a fee). Ophir Place and The Orchard were offered as local examples.

PRIVATE GROUP HOME — a single family home where a care provider gives up to six unrelated seniors board and care.

NON PROFIT GROUP HOME — bedsitter accommodation provided for 9-12 independent older adults. All dining is communal and services are provided by a live-in housemother (such as Abbeyfield).

CONTINUING CARE RETIREMENT COMMUNITY — a housing development which provides a full range of accommodations and services for older adults, including independent living, congregate housing and nursing care. Residents may move from one level to another as their needs change. These are rental units, only (such as Parkwood and Berwick House).

Henry Kamphof is the executive director of the Capital Region Housing Corporation. He said his corporation has built about 325 affordable housing units across the region in the past 10 years; another 2,500 have been built by other non-profit agencies. Rental cost of these units is based on expenditure of 30 per cent of the person's income.

Working with the provincial government, Kamphof said it became apparent there were too few units available, and that costs continued to be too high for many seniors, but that problem is being addressed, he said. One of the solutions being pursued is the development of more affordable, easily accessible secondary suites.

Kamphof talked about several assistance programs available to assist home owners to renovate their homes to bring them up to current building code regulations. Such flexibility is key to providing more, better, independent accommodation in the future, he said.

Jeannette Hughes, member of the Advisory Committee for Persons with Disabilities and one of the event organizers, elaborated on the concept of suites. She initiated the work done in Sidney to develop accessible secondary suites for persons with disabilities, and has written a paper called Homegrown Solutions for the federal government. The information will be available to the province and to municipalities and will be in the library system.

The virtues of the suites, she said, goes beyond seniors, while it allows people to remain independent longer, it also helps young families to purchase a home and it continues to blend the generations within communities, rather than separate them.

She estimated that up to 400 houses in Sidney could be candidates for secondary suites; that translates to thousands of homes in the Greater Victoria area, she said. There are programs (such as SAFER) that provide financial assistance to homeowners wanting to take part in such a program.

That information is available through the Capital Region Housing Corporation, 388-6422 (email: <http://www.crd.bc.ca>).

Allowing people to 'age in place' is the trend going into the new millennium.

Baby Boomers, the largest single group to form a generation this century, is on the cusp of retirement, and how to cope with that is a question faced by people involved in health care and housing. Geri Hinton, director for the Office for Seniors, Ministry of Health and Ministry Responsible for Seniors, has been working with Henry Kamphof, executive director of the Capital Region Housing Corporation, to come up with a plan for providing more affordable housing options in the future. "There's lots of data showing that people who are able to live independently live longer and are healthier, overall," Hinton said.

Filling the information gaps

"We looking at ways to allow more people to do that, with supports in place for care, and in a way they can afford." She admitted there had been a gap of several years where the topic had laid idle with government agencies, and not enough units have been built. She said there is a government will to see more units, and a more flexible variety of options, put before the public. Integrating information between housing and health care accommodation agencies is also beginning,

Reuniting neighborhoods

Crime rates in North Saanich are the lowest in the province. It's incident rate is 47 per 1,000 residents, just above the 46 per 1,000 in Coldstream and Spallumcheen.

The highest rates in the province are Williams Lake (260 offences per 1,000 residents), Victoria (219 per 1,000), Courtenay (210 per 1,000) and Vancouver (175 per 1,000).

What North Saanich, Coldstream and Spallumcheen all have in common, of course, is that they have no commercial centre or downtown core. There are fewer places for people to loiter and get into trouble caused by idleness.

Coldstream, and to a greater degree, North Saanich, is largely made up of people of stable income; Spallumcheen, apart from an industrial centre, is mostly a farming community. They can't fairly be compared to Victoria and Vancouver, with their highly developed downtown cores and higher numbers of transient populations. Both cities set themselves up as destinations for all kinds of visitors; while most are law-abiding, they will also get a larger percentage of those who are not.

But the perception remains, not just in centres like the Peninsula but in many small towns and cities across the province, that crime is worse now than it ever was.

We tend to want to throw more police resources into the fray, to put a stop to crime. The recent budget should make us re-think how we spend our limited funds.

As the police point out, crime is everybody's business. Everyone needs to take responsibility for themselves, and for their communities.

There are a number of ways to do that, from the fairly passive to the more aggressive. Two forums are coming up on the Peninsula to lay out some of the options. The first, on May 6 (7:30 p.m. at Silver Threads) is being held by the Sidney-North Saanich RCMP Advisory Committee. Under discussion will be programs such as Neighborhood Watch, Block Parents, Citizens on Patrol and other community-based programs. In these, the police help train and monitor the programs; the citizens run them.

Involvement ranges from simply getting to know your neighbors and being aware of vehicles or people who are not ordinarily part of the neighborhood, to riding, in pairs, in a vehicle through the streets of the town and reporting suspicious activity.

A forum in Central Saanich on May 27 will look at ways to deal in a new way with those who have committed crimes. Community (restorative) justice is a new way of thinking about crime and, especially, petty criminals. Dealing with those people on the community level, and finding meaningful ways for people to repay their debt to society, is proving to be an effective deterrent to crime.

Mark down the meeting dates. Your attendance could make all the difference. -J.R.

The Nisga'a Treaty is shameful

Glen Clark is a short-term tactician, but he's not wise. His policies have already proven disastrous.

This man thinks the Nisga'a Treaty is great. He wants to push it through to get his name on it before he quits. Kind of gives you pause, doesn't it.

My real disappointment is not with the cynical wastrels in Victoria, but with the dilettantes in Ottawa. The Nisga'a Treaty and the others to follow are well-intentioned but they are the antithesis of Canadian liberalism. They establish apartheid, reduce democracy, hinder private ownership, prejudice the rights of those not in power, and reopen existing legislation in education and other areas that Canadians rely on as part of our fundamental right.

How ironic that these treaties are authored by the federal Liberal government with its noble traditions.

The treaties separate us onto different tracts of land, based on race. Sure it's being done with bribes, not guns. It's still apartheid. We are setting ourselves up for ever-worsening race relations. We will grow apart, not together.

When humans aren't integrated, when they don't have equal rights, they start to pick at each other. Pickiness turns to derision, turns to anger, turns to hate, turns to full-blown entrenched racism.

Imagine trying to convince Martin Luther King his people should be located onto reservations rather than integrated, should have special rights unique from those of other citizens, should not have the same protection in law and should be unequal and different forever. He wouldn't be pleasant to these federal Liberals.

The treaties lock in reserves. Reserves are not democratic. Band assets are not distributed to individuals.

Reserve homes, for example are communally owned, not owned by individuals. Many individuals are on the dole and there is little to do.

We know this system dooms human beings.

demonstrate that too many different jurisdictions reduce wealth, worsen conservation and resource planning and reduce the efficiency of justice, education, health and municipal services.

Reading the Nisga'a Treaty is like reading the Tax Act. It is long, complex and full of unexplored loopholes. It will spawn an army of high-priced bureaucrats, consultants and lawyers.

These people are being paid a fortune to put the treaties in place. They will be paid forever to interpret them.

The Nisga'a Treaty is worth a half billion dollars, according to the NDP and $1.3 billion according to Robin Richardson, a private economist. NDP forecasting has been hopeless on other issues.

Let's assume Richardson is closer. The B.C. treaties could then cost some $50 billion. This is just one province. Treaties will also get reopened in other provinces. There are no automatic offsetting cutbacks in annual transfer payments to natives. The federal Liberals have worked hard to get their financial house in order. Has the federal Finance Department analyzed these treaties? Can we pay this much without lowering everyone's standard of living? Are we passing an unmanageable burden on to our children?

I don't think most politicians have really thought through the issues.

It's politically correct today to be in favor of these treaties no matter what's in them. But these treaties are wrong. Canadians in future will look back to this time and wonder how we could have sacrificed democracy, equality and integration.

It's not too late. Please phone your MP and your MLA. Tell them to pay attention and reconsider.

Guest editorial

by David Black owner, Black Press

Why are the federal Liberals entrenching it?

The majority of natives have never voted in favor of self-government. Their elite want it, most do not. Native women in particular, have voiced concerns. They are afraid of losing rights. They have been ignored by the federal Liberals. Only 44 per cent of eligible Nisga'a voted in favor of their treaty. The rest voted against, or abstained on one of the most important votes in the history of their people.

Why so many abstained is unknown. It couldn't have been lack of interest. The federal Liberals interpreted the vote as approval.

With 50 some treaties in place throughout B.C., each setting up different jurisdictions with different laws, we are Balkanizing our province.

The Balkans are not just a synonym for discrimination, racism, political unrest and constant warfare. They also

Huge deficit a betrayal of British Columbians

This NDP government is like every family's loser uncle, the one who's always getting in trouble and then promising to do better, spending more than he makes, buying things he can't afford, rich only in excuses and empty promises.

And leaving those around him to pick up the pieces.

Finance Minister Joy MacPhail's budget numbers may sound abstract. The government will spend $890 million more than it takes in to operate this year, money it will have to borrow.

It plans a $1.9-billion capital projects spree, all borrowed. Add other spending and the result is a $3.2-billion increase in the taxpayer-supported debt, a 13-per-cent jump in one year.

It's as if you already owed $100,000 on your mortgage, couldn't pay your regular bills, and still went out and borrowed $13,000 more to buy things you wanted.

It's called taxpayer-supported debt because it's money you owe. And every day this year, it will go up $3 million, until it's $6,472 per person, $26,000 for a family of four. You'll pay interest charges of $1.9 billion.

Premier Glen Clark has his reasons, or excuses. A recession — and he's finally admitted we're in one — is a tough time to balance a budget and a good time to build, he says.

That can be argued. But not by a government that has posted eight straight deficits, through good times and bad, always promising to do better.

And not by a government elected on a false claim that it could show prudent fiscal management.

PAUL WILLCOCKS
At the Legislature

How's this for a promise?

"Without a sound financial base, it is impossible for government to address adequately the priorities of its citizens. Prudent fiscal management means getting British Columbia's deficit under control."

That was then-finance minister Glen Clark, introducing the NDP's first budget in 1992. He started out with $6.5 billion in direct debt, and in eight years has increased it to $21.5 billion. He started with total provincial debt of $19.4 billion. Now it's $34.7 billion. That's not getting the debt under control.

Clark is not stupid. But his defense of this over-spending is, with respect, stupid.

"What schools do you want us to close? What hospitals?" he snaps.

That's hokey. The choice is not which school to close — though it may be about whether portables will do for another year. Spending is going up in eight ministries this year, not just education and health. The government plans to add 600 more people to the payroll. The challenge is to find ways to spend less on hundreds of small programs.

Perhaps the Women's Equality ministry could survive without increasing its spending on policy research. Maybe the Environment Youth Team doesn't need $8 million more.

The government didn't make those decisions. It decided to stake its political future on a budget that makes no economic sense. It won't work politically, because it's too irresponsible and because the government has no credibility.

Economically, it will just make things worse. People will not choose to move to a province, or start a business, where they immediately become responsible for a massive debt. They know that the interest costs mean higher taxes, that the eventual requirement to repay the money — and it does have to be repaid — will mean higher taxes.

And they know the debt will handcuff future governments.

They will not choose to invest where the government has shown it can't manage, running up a deficit of $544 million this year, more than five times the budgeted amount.

They will not choose to invest in a province where the only consistent policy is to spend more money.

And without investment, jobs will continue to disappear and our children will be left with few opportunities and a huge debt to repay.

Clark and company have let British Columbians down with this budget. Again.

Lotteries — There's a lot to lose

So ... did you buy a lottery ticket last week? As usual? Checked the winning numbers yesterday? Lost again? As usual?

Lucky you.

It could have been much worse. Your numbers could have come up and made you an instant multi-millionaire.

You'd think you were on top of the world. More likely, your troubles would just be beginning.

Consider the people of Peschici, a tiny town in rural Italy. Three thousand people live in Peschici and they've never had it plush. They are fishing folk. Their livelihoods go up and down like the Mediterranean tides, but even in a good year with plenty of fish, the streets of Peschici are not clogged with Alfa Romeos and beautiful people flashing Visa Platinum cards. Chronic unemployment dogs Peschici, running at about 30 percent of the work force. In other words, one in three adults are usually out of work. The citizens of Peschici are poor and they're used to it.

So you can imagine the sensation when the news came out that a group of 100 locals had won big in the Italian State Lottery.

Fifty-five and a half million dollars big. Each winning ticket holder got better than $500,000 — or about 30 years' salary for the average Peschici fisherman or farm laborer. One hundred Peschici citizens were suddenly — instantly — rich beyond their wildest imaginings.

Unfortunately, that left about 2,900 locals right where they'd always been. It didn't take long for the color green to wash over the town of Peschici. A local butcher who used to be everybody's friend turned sullen, muttering oaths and threats. Townsfolk heard him growl that "someone was going to get killed."

The problem? The butcher was usually among the people that got together to buy tickets, but this time, someone had failed to reserve his ticket.

Meanwhile, Mimi Lamargese was on top of the world. It was his 'system' that had produced the winning number. Signor Lamargese decided the lottery win was a sign from God of his certified brilliance. He began to talk loud and long about running for political office, so that the entire nation could benefit from his shrewdness.

Two brothers — Giuseppe and Franco — weren't listening to Lamargese's delusions of grandeur — they had troubles of their own. Before the big lottery win, the brothers had been very close. Giuseppe had been set to marry a girl named Jessica, and his brother Franco would stand up as his Best Man. But it turned out that Giuseppe had decided not to buy a lottery ticket this time around. Franco picked one up — and became one of the fortunate hundred. Now, Giuseppe is as poor as he's ever been, but Franco is a rich man.

Guess who's courting Jessica.

Anyone who knew Peschici before the lottery windfall would be hard-pressed to recognize it today. There are fights in the cafes; dark threats reverberate in the piazza.

Whole families whose histories have been intertwined for centuries are no longer speaking. Many who used to drink grappa now drink champagne, but they have fewer people to drink it with.

I imagine more than a few of them have become solitary drinkers anyway. Sitting one to a table, studiously ignoring the people around them. Perhaps wordlessly lifting a glass to "the good old days" in Peschici — when everyone was hard up.

And they didn't know how really lucky they were.

Honors piling up for local citizens

Sidney teenager Deryck Ball was one of 41 musicians chosen from the 450 who applied to play with the province-wide Cadet Honor Band.

He was selected because of his excellent skills as a musician and because he works well as a team member, says Major Teena Weeks, the music advisor for the region.

Deryck is a Grade 11 student at Stelly's secondary, where he is also a percussionist in the jazz and concert bands. He's a member of 676 Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron, Kittyhawk, in Sidney.

The honor band cadets had three days to rehearse together before playing concerts in Comox, Nanaimo, Duncan, and at the Alex Gooldeen Hall in Victoria to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"I know quite a few of them from before," Deryck says, so they weren't all strangers to strike up a band together. But he adds that the last concert, at the conservatory of music, was the best.

Deryck would have applied for the honor band on his own, but he was also invited to by Captain Forbes, the Director of Music.

Deryck is the Drum Major of the cadet band, which practices every Wednesday, and he plays for the marching band as well as concerts. He also plays for the concert choir at school.

"I love music," he says with enthusiastic understatement.

Corp. Lloyd Gauthier ... received honors years before moving on to a new posting in New Brunswick. Gauthier was recently presented with a Certificate of merit from the Canadian Centre of Police-Race Relations for his contributions to enhancing police-community race relations in his career. He was nominated for the award by Janis Henry, a Tsartlip Band member who worked with Gauthier on several policing projects during his time on the Peninsula.

"He was a really special person, and he left a real legacy here," she said. "I was so pleased to hear he got this award." Gauthier initially joined the Force in the early 1980s as a Native Special Constable with the mandate of providing policing services to First Nations communities.

He was promoted to Constable in 1989, then to Corporal in 1992. He speaks fluent Cree and is from Treaty 8 Kelly Lake First Nations in British Columbia.

Twenty-eight foursomes took the challenge at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club's Daffodil Bridge and Luncheon on March 25.

Gwen Ames of Glen Meadows took first place in the competition, while Roberta Harding, also of Glen Meadows, won the major raffle prize of a weekend at Fairwinds-Schooner Cove Resort.

The sun is peeking out from behind the clouds (at least sometimes), turning the thoughts of many of us toward getting our hands in the dirt.

If gardening is on your mind, but not in your schedule, Parkland secondary students are ready to help. They are also poised, paint brushes and rakes in hand, to take care of many of those Spring projects you need done.

Proceeds will go towards graduation expenses. Call Parkland school at 655-2700 and book a pair of students for your job.

Policing for the future

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

How safe do you feel in your neighborhood? The Sidney Police Advisory Committee will give the community a chance to talk about their concerns at an upcoming community forum on policing issues. The meeting will be held at Silver Threads, 10030 Resthaven Drive, on Thursday, May 6, 7:30 p.m.

"From that forum, we will take a report to council," said committee member Larry Cross. "We expect the forum will help set future direction for the Police Advisory, and to help develop policy for council."

The committee expects issues such as traffic and pedestrian safety, vandalism and theft will be addressed. In turn, the committee and police can talk about community-based programs, such as Neighborhood Watch, Block Watch, Citizens on Patrol and others will be discussed. There will also be opportunity to talk about the effects of the closure of the Sidney's courthouse on the community, and on new trends in policing philosophy such as community justice.

Cross said his committee has expressed interest in the community justice philosophy being explored by a citizens' group in Central Saanich, and will be exploring ways to work cooperatively with them. The Central Saanich group will host a community forum at Bayside middle school on May 27.

Stelly's 30-hour famine this weekend

Human rights, sports and performing arts are all in the forefront of extracurricular life at Stelly's this month. As the third term nears its end, many students find themselves juggling their academic and extracurricular commitments — not to mention the distraction of increasingly pleasant weather.

SEARCH (Students Endorsing Amnesty and Rights Concerning Humans), one of Stelly's newer clubs, has kicked off a major campaign entitled "Change for Change." The group is collecting donations to sponsor an eight-year-old Tibetan boy named Gyatso.

Gyatso lives in a refugee camp in India. Like the Dalai Lama and thousands of other people, he is a victim of China's occupation of Tibet.

By sponsoring Gyatso, SEARCH is putting a human face on the Tibetan situation. This will hopefully inspire students to become involved in the campaign to free Tibet and end human rights violations there.

In addition to the "Change for Change" campaign, SEARCH will be holding a Tibetan movie night in May. This will run in conjunction with Stelly's annual anti-racism week.

Another major humanitarian effort at Stelly's, the World Vision 30-Hour Famine, will be taking place this Friday and Saturday. More than 100 students will go without solid food for 30 hours.

These students have been collecting pledges

BRIANNA NYBERG

from sponsors who support their effort. The so-called "famine" is meant to be a symbolic gesture which shows that students recognize that millions of people are suffering from real famines.

The pledges students collect are what take the 30-Hour Famine beyond the realm of symbolism. World Vision uses the money Stelly's raises (around $6,000 last year) to help hungry and underprivileged people. By participating in the Famine, students are doing something real to help improve their world.

On the night of the Famine, most students sleep over at the school. Activities such as movies, games and sports are arranged to help pass the time.

This year's Famine will feature live music by Stelly's bands Apollo Groove and Seven Even.

Stelly's Choir and Vocal Jazz groups are busy preparing for concerts and festivals. On March 30, they performed in the district-wide Saanich Sings festival at the Ridge Theatre.

On April 7, they will be singing in the adjudicated Westcoast ChoirFest, also held at the Ridge.

COMING UP later this spring are concerts at the Coast Victoria Harborside hotel and the annual performing arts Ensemble Nights.

Sports teams currently in season include badminton, rugby and motor sports. The boys' rugby team have just begun their competitive season, with games against Esquimalt and Claremont. The fledgling girls' rugby team is also off to a good, if somewhat muddy, start.

Stelly's high-ranked badminton team will be competing in the BC championships in Port Coquitlam this year, proving that they are continuing Stelly's strong badminton tradition.

At the end of April, THE PLAYERS at Stelly's will be producing a play, The Farnedale Avenue Housing Estate Townswomen's Guild Dramatic Society Murder Mystery. Watch this column for more details on this fabulous British comedy.

Vision Matters

Rigid gas permeable contacts

Rigid gas permeable lenses (RGPs) need an image consultant. Patients shiver at the thought of putting a HARD contact lens in their eye. Yet the truth is, for many patients they are extremely beneficial and comfortable.

RGPs allow more oxygen to the cornea (the clear front of the eye) than any soft lens manufactured today. More oxygen means better corneal health. The maintenance of RGPs is also quite simple. Gas Perms can last for several years, though the latest materials trade off some durability for comfort.

Perhaps the best feature of RGPs is that, when correctly fitted, they provide the clearest vision possible in contact lenses. In some cases, the wearing of gas perm lenses can stop or slow down the progression of near sightedness (myopia).

There are not many disadvantages to RGP lenses. There can be a feeling of awareness, they can be uncomfortable for the first few days and dusty environments may cause discomfort. The end result: excellent vision, long lasting lenses, minimal care and healthy corneas versus a short period of adaptation.

You may want to ask your optometrist if RGPs are for you.

Internal clocks can wreak havoc

I would like to introduce you to chronotherapy. No, this is not yet another resur-rection of some ancient alter-native therapy that was aban-doned long ago by civiliza-tions that sacrificed virgins and worshiped giraffe poop.

A chronotherapist does not measure, massage or med-icate your serum chronos.

It refers to the fact that your body is run by an in-ternal clock that actually changes your physiology during the course of a day.

This daily fluctuation of your body's temperature, blood pressure, heart rate, sleepiness, urine output etc., is called the Circadian Rhythm. Circadian from the Greek circa dia or "about a day" and rhythm from the Vati-canese "method of contraception that usu-ally results in pregnancy."

In fact, a tiny biological clock operates in the part of the brain known as the hypothal-amus. This master pacemaker can actually be surgically removed. The clock, which runs off the light input from the eyes as well as its own internal hormones like mela-tonin, can be thrown off by shiftwork, fre-quent flying and aging. Resetting it involves holding the scan button while pressing the set button with the radio on FM.

Besides the daily fluctuations that occur in the body, there are also annual and monthly rhythms. Well-recognized monthly rhythms include the female reproductive cycle and the male sock-changing cycle.

An annual clock regulates hibernation, depression, some types of headaches, and an overwhelming desire to dropkick any-one associated with Revenue Canada.

If your doctor is aware of chronotherapy, then rather than blanketing your system with drugs that may be working when you don't need them to (and vice versa), he/she may be able to time medication to be syn-chronized with your body's natural clock.

Due to our circadian rhythm, certain conditions are worse at specific times of the day.

6 A.M. - NOON

Conditions you are most likely to have problems with, on awakening, include:

1. High Blood Pressure. Your BP rises rapidly the first two hours after waking.

Elizabeth Smith has April 9 as the new date for a health fair at the Tsartlip Cultural Building on West Saanich Road. The fair, origi-nally scheduled for March, was postponed because of the death of a prominent community member.

Health Fair rescheduled

There will be booths and seminars throughout the day, which starts with an opening prayer at 9 a.m. and will end with a powwow

Your BP medication should be timed to coincide with this rise.

As this is also the time of day that your pulse is the fastest, it is no surprise that you may suffer ...

2. Heart Attacks. The most common time of the day to incur a heart attack is 8 a.m., which is why I always set my alarm for 8:27.

This is also when angina is at its worst.

3. Nasal allergy symp-toms. Those with sea-sonal allergies typically jolt the entire neighborhood out of bed early in the a.m. as they sneeze the frontal lobes right out their nostrils. Take the anti-histamine at night.

4. Honey, I've got a Migraine Headache is a legitimate excuse ... er, complaint, if used in the morning when migraines usually occur.

5. Rheumatoid Arthritis pain. RA pain is worse in the a.m., therefore target this time by taking a long acting smart bomb anti-in-flammatory at night.

NOON - 6 P.M.

A good time to be alive as all systems work better in the afternoon.

6 P.M. - MIDNIGHT

1. Pain of osteoarthritis. After a day of wear and tear, the weight bearing joints of OA begin to throb. Take the anti inflamma-tory mid-afternoon.

2. Maximum stomach acid production is at 6 p.m. This is the optimal time to take your antacids.

3. Scabies itch. These little critters have their own clocks that wake them up as you start off to sleep. If your skin rash itches at night, it's scabies until proven otherwise.

MIDNIGHT - 6 A.M.

1. The night belongs to Asthma. Asthma medication should be targeted to be effec-tive at this time i.e., prednisone, if taken, should be taken at 1500h.

2. Ulcer crisis. Stomach ulcer pain wors-ens at night.

3. Transient total amnesia. Selective male memory loss occurs most often dur-ing the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Crier surveys town support

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Even a town that's used to having a Town Crier isn't always prepared to meet him, fully kitted-out, on Beacon Avenue.

Bert Stevens and his assistant, Brenda Harfield (acting on behalf of the Sidney Business Association), were visiting merchants on the main street to ask two questions:

"Do you support Sidney Days?"

"Do you support the annual sidewalk sale?"

The merchants were only

too glad to answer. Most said yes to both questions, but there was a little more mixed response to the questions about what form that support would take.

"Some are saying yes, they will book a table or donate funds or other necessities. Others said they weren't prepared to book a table or to volunteer to help with the organizing," Stevens said.

Some merchants said they would be more ready to be involved if the event was a street fair, rather than a sidewalk sale. "We could certainly look at a name change," said Harfield.

The survey was undertaken because merchant response to the sidewalk sale has been dwindling.

"This is an event that brings a lot of people to town, and we want to know how to make it a better experience for everyone," Harfield said.

They will look at some new ways to involve more groups, too, such as street artists. To get involved, call the SBA at 655-0321.

Gypsy Moth Aerial Spray Program

Information for Area Residents

The gypsy moth aerial spray program will take place this spring over 13,400 hectares on Southern Vancouver Island. Spray boundaries in this area are:

- Greater Victoria — 12,203 hectares;
- Brentwood Bay — 602 hectares.

Brentwood Aerial Spraying 602 Hectares

A biological insecticide — Btk — will be used and is approved by Health Canada and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. It is not harmful to humans.

If you wish to minimize exposure, stay inside with windows closed during the spraying. If you have concerns, wash fruits and vegetables if they have been exposed to the spray.

The ongoing gypsy moth monitoring program has located high numbers of this non-native pest in the spray areas. These voracious leaf-eating insects can seriously damage forests, parkland and urban areas, as well as nursery stock, fruit trees and Garry oaks.

Aerial spraying to eradicate this pest will take place between April 1 and June 30, 1999. In April, spraying will be completed by 7:30 a.m., and in May and June by 7 a.m. Three to four applications will be made, each ten days apart—and 24-hours notice will be given before each spray.

Please note there will be some noise as the planes pass overhead to apply the spray.

For more information call the gypsy moth information line at 387-8494, in Victoria, and toll free at 1-877-552-1122, or check the Ministry of Forests' web site at www.for.gov.bc.ca

Dwarf trees are a fruitful endeavor for seniors

■ Growing fruit gives couple an occupation and hobby that keeps them busy and active year round

Buds are bursting in abundance at the Fruit Trees and More dwarf tree orchard and nursery in Deep Cove.

When these 480 dwarf and semi-dwarf trees mature, more than 15 pieces of fruit from each tree will be ripe for picking.

Bob and Verna Duncan are owners of this extensive and unique fruit tree orchard and nursery. Verna says, "Unless you are young and agile, it is very difficult to prune and harvest a standard fruit tree. When you start getting older, you can't keep going up and down a ladder all of the time to prune or pick fruit. And it's terrible to watch fruit go to waste."

Verna suggests dwarf fruit trees are ideal for seniors. "When you start off with a one-year-old tree, they can be readily trained to grow along a fence line or support structure. Or they can be kept in containers on a balcony. They are also easy to prune, thin, and harvest. You will never need to use a ladder since they are simple to maintain at six or seven feet high."

Apples from England, Germany, France and the Netherlands are only a few examples of the abundance of international flavor found at this unique orchard. The Duncan's forte is connoisseur and heritage dwarf apples which are far superior to regular supermarket apples. They also grow more than 300 other dwarf or semi-dwarf fruit trees including pears, apricots, citrus, peaches, plums and hardy subtropicals on their three-quarters of an acre.

The couple has been growing fruit for more than 20 years and Bob is a full-time entomologist at the Canadian Forestry Service. Not only do they have a variety of training systems for dwarf fruit trees on display in their orchard, but they also do extensive work in propagation.

DEBBIE NOWAK

Golden age

"Also, such trees are very precocious and will bear fruit within two years of planting. Their fruit tends to be larger, better colored and full of flavorful than other fruit trees. Compared to a standard tree, the percentage of fruit to foliage is greater," Bob says.

"Dwarf trees don't adversely impact or shade other parts of the garden. They can be planted in aesthetically pleasing ways, such as a fruiting hedgerow along a garden path, a privacy hedge around a patio, or a miniature trellised fruit orchard."

Dwarf trees are simple to plant. It is best to select and prepare the planting site in advance by working in some well-aged compost. Amend the soil with dolomite lime, adjusting the pH to 6.5. The trees can be planted three to four feet apart so even if you have a small yard, you can plant several trees. The trees must have full access to afternoon sun and good drainage.

Dwarf trees are best planted in the fall to allow roots to become well-established before spring. Since most of the propagating is done in February and March, it is best to request specific varieties as early as possible. Fruit Trees and More can also accommodate customers with special requests for propagation in their own backyards.

Fruit Trees and More provides ongoing customer support with site selection, planting, training, pruning, and orchard maintenance. The Duncans can be contacted at 656-4269 for the varieties available and any special requests.

Verna says, "It is wonderful to eat fresh fruit right off the branches. Nothing tastes better."

Song in her heart a melody to live by

Rachel Goldsworthy

News Review contributor

Edith Olds just got a birthday card from a friend traveling in Bali. The card says: 'Those who wish to sing always find a song.'

It's the perfect card for this Sidney resident who recently turned 93.

When she was a little girl, she sang to the chickens her dad kept in their back yard. As an adult, she turned her talents to singing with people; she still practices with the Peninsula Singers every week and performs with them at their twice-yearly regular concerts and many other events.

When she was 12, her school was chosen to sing at the Albert Hall in London as part of the post-World War I peace process.

"We wore white dresses," she remembers, "and the boys wore white shirts and dark shorts. The sopranos wore blue sashes and the altos wore red ones."

As a contralto, Edith wore a red sash. The audience sat in rising tiers in the round hall, and the mass of children in white must have been quite a sight.

When she finished school and got a job working in the couture industry in the West End of London, she used her earnings to pay for lessons and shortly after she was married a local teacher suggested she enter a singing competition.

She won first prize at the first festival she attended.

Then she and her husband, an amateur pianist, performed at concerts, earning seven shillings and sixpence each time, in spite of their amateur status.

"It doesn't sound like much now," she says, "but it meant quite a bit."

When she moved to Sidney to join her daughter who had moved here with her husband and children, Edith joined the Silver Threads and quickly began singing with the choir and playing the hand bells, which she really enjoyed. Soon, she was conducting.

She's been a member of the Peninsula Singers since 1981, a few months after they were formed. Part of the original committee and still the Registrar, she has seen the group grow from 16 members to more than 50 today.

She was asked recently to act as the president, but she turned down the offer.

Instead, the group made her Honorary Chair for life.

"I love them all dearly," she says, "and they're awfully kind to me."

New bus for Mount Newton Centre

Rachel Goldsworthy

News contributor

Mount Newton Centre provides a number of services for seniors. To continue to do so, the centre will be getting a new bus within the next few weeks.

Every weekday it will transport up to 18 people from all over the Peninsula - from Land's End to Royal Oak - to the adult day program at the centre. On Saturdays, the bus picks up 15 to 18 people for a day-long respite program of social activities or special events so that caregivers at home have a chance for a break.

In the course of the year, about 500 people give their time and energy to the centre. They and the 11 staff members touch the lives of about 4,000 Peninsula residents every year.

The MS Cezanne cruises 102 passengers along the rivers that shaped the delightful regions of Provence and Burgundy.

What we call "Art de Vivre"

■ Cruising on the MS Cezanne promises to be a world of experience to remember.

Cruise through the wonderful Provence and Burgundy regions of France with a luxurious river ship as your home. Embark upon the MS Cezanne and be enchanted by her elegant decor and refined comfort. Be enveloped by the "Art de vivre" that is the MS Cezanne.

On board your intimate floating hotel carrying only 102 passengers, you will experience many different worlds, from the timeless grandeur of the Roman ruins in Arles to the mysterious and alluring appeal of the Camargue Nature Reserve. Designed to navigate the French waterways, the ship hugs the shorelines for close-up views of grapes ripening in the famous vineyards of Provence and Burgundy, chateaux clinging to steep cliffs and fields of lavender blossoming in the sun.

The MS Cezanne provides uncompromising standards and comfort for a trip along the Rhone and Saone Rivers. Our solely outside cabins are spacious and equipped with individually controlled air conditioning. The large bathrooms, with their teak floors and marble vanities, are worthy of most yachts. En route you can enjoy fine shipboard amenities including two Jacuzzis and ample sun deck, a bar, a boutique, a fitness centre, a spacious lounge and an elegant restaurant where you can experience new and interesting flavors complemented by the finest wines. All meals are served with single seating and are prepared by a master chef, featuring classic French cuisine enhanced by local specialties. A team of professional waiters ensures that the service at your table meets the highest standards.

During the day you can relax on the spacious sun decks as you admire the beauty and variety of imposing landscapes as the ship continues to sail on the Rhone and Saone Rivers. You can explore the rich heritage of dear Provence, and after an exhilarating day of discovery, enjoy the company of your fellow passengers with drinks in the Dolce Vita lounge.

The MS Cezanne offers you all the ingredients with which to compose not just a cruise, but a lifetime of special memories of a very special journey.

Keeping up with Mother Nature can be a full-time job

Several new bits about those Blue Orchard bees, and their domestic relatives.

Patti W., who is a bee keeper tells us that wild bees are not affected by these predatory mites which destroy whole hives. So far her bees have been spared, but she asks that readers be assured that mites in no way affect the quality of honey, and that aerial spraying with "B.T.k." will not harm either domestic or wild bees. Along the same lines, Oliver S. has had great success with his Blue Orchard Bees which are now leaving their holes and buzzing about. He says that his bee boxes are on the WEST side of his house, and seem to work fine, so facing them either South or East obviously isn't the only road to success.

Oliver wondered how he might clean out the holes in his houses, since as soon as bees leave they immediately start to fill the emptied holes with eggs. I suspect that the only safe route would be to have fresh houses all ready to go, then remove last year's, clean the holes with a narrow brush, and insert 5/16 inch straws, which could be removed each year thereafter, washed, dried, and re-inserted. He has now moved his bee boxes from their usual spot and propped them in the middle of his blossoming peach tree. They shouldn't have any trouble finding the flowers from there!

Colleen G. called about seedlings "damping off." This is a horrible fungal disease that can wipe out a whole tray of tiny plants overnight.

To avoid this, space your seedlings an inch or more apart, and water them sparingly. I think you'd be safer if you didn't cover the tray with plastic. "Captan" is the fungicide to use for control, but don't use it unless you are desperate.

Joan M. has guests arriving shortly and wondered what she might use to brighten up a small part of her garden by the front door. She has some primula, which should last if she keeps dead flowers picked.

HELEN LANG

Over the Garden Fence

To these she could add patches of pansies, which are beautiful right now, and can last all summer if kept picked, and cut back occasionally to keep them compact. To these she could add some patches of wall flowers which are just about to come into bloom, and, of course, smell delightful.

Connie McD. has a glorious pink, ruffled, white fringed, azalea in bloom. At the tip of one branch there is a single bright red flower. This phenomenon is called a "sport," a genetic change within plant cells, and accounts for some new varieties of roses, apples, and carnations. (Wise Garden Encyclopedia). Nature's awesome!

Shirley L. asks how much Epson salts to put under her roses ... a couple of tablespoons should do ... and how many alfalfa pellets to spread under them. I'd use about a cup under each rose.

If any of you have received an Easter lily, don't throw it away when it ceases to flower. Transplant it into a larger pot, feed it over the summer with 6-8-6, once a month, and it should flower for you again next year, but not until late May or June.

I'd like to encourage all gardeners to take advantage of this opportunity to hear Norman Todd speak on rhododendrons, not just ordinary rhodos, but on rare and spectacular ones.

He is going to address the Peninsula Garden Club, Thursday April 8, meeting starting at 7:30 at Sidney Silver Threads. Come and join us, please!

It's time to get those humming-bird feeders up and running. Judith S. has lots of them darting about her beautiful garden already. Please keep your feeders scrupulously clean.

Hummers can be killed as a result of careless house-keeping.

Shopping for a mortgage? There's expert help available

■ Debbie Seeboth has more than 15 years experience in putting together successful mortgage plans; that's her commitment to her clients

Is cash back on your mortgage a good deal? Is your bank offering you the best rates for your mortgage? Do you know?

If you've been asking yourself these questions, you should call Debbie Seeboth — she's a mortgage broker.

Debbie has been helping people finance their homes for over 15 years while working with three of Canada's large financial institutions, with the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and now as an independent broker.

Debbie doesn't work for any one bank or credit union, so she can check around to find the lowest interest rates, the terms and conditions that will best suit each client.

"Each person is different," Debbie says. "Everybody's borrowing requirements are different. Some people want long term, some want short term. People with seasonal incomes might need more flexibility in qualification and payment plans."

And that's where Debbie's experience and research skills come in. She talks to her clients and finds out exactly what they need. Within a day, she's back with written offers. The client decides which institution, which deal, and Debbie will help arrange it.

And all at absolutely no cost to the client.

"People are busy today," Debbie says.

"I'm the customer's advocate in matching their needs with the real bank situation. Borrowing customers really need somebody on their side to do the negotiating."

Debbie searches for the combinations that meet each person's needs, and presents the options. Phoning around to find the lowest interest rates might not be enough to ensure the best mortgage.

Different combinations of fixed and variable interest rates, prepayment options, penalty clauses, and flexibility can be hard to sort out, and Debbie can help.

As a broker, she can analyze the package to see if it's really worth it for the customer.

She emphasizes that she knows the importance of personal information, and feels very strongly about privacy.

"Everything is confidential," she says. "We take their needs very seriously and do our best for our clients."

As proof that Debbie treats her customers with respect and integrity, and finds them the best mortgages, a significant amount of her business is with repeat customers and referrals.

"A lot of my clients have heard about me from a sister, a cousin, a co-worker," Debbie says.

Another significant point is that because her office deals only with mortgages and a lot of them, she has clout with the lending institutions and can also negotiate lower closing costs for lawyers and appraiser's fees.

"Mortgages are all that we do," Debbie says. "We can help clients with other products, but we do mortgages full time."

But she does a whole lot more — Debbie is a member of a local Rotary Club, the Sidney Business Association, and the Saanich Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, and she takes her community work seriously too.

She's available through her Sidney office 24 hours a day, so feel free to give her a call at 656-9551 or go in for a visit at 9838 Fourth Avenue.

There's no obligation, no cost, and there is a great deal waiting for you.

Dealing with financial institutions and the dizzying number of options to pursue can leave novice mortgage customers feeling a little confused. That's where Debbie Seeboth comes in. She can outline the options and help you make an informed decision.

Early education on the Peninsula

Robert Thompson
& Brad Morrison

The story of the first public school on the Saanich Peninsula is, not unlike many tales of our past, a blend of fact and folklore.

It is a popular belief, for example, that Mrs. Fanny Butler — wife of Captain George Butler, the patriarch of the Butler clan — was the first teacher. Archival records, on the other hand, unequivocally show that the first teacher was a young man by the name of Charles Newton Young, who would later distinguish himself in Nanaimo.

This story of the first public school on the Saanich Peninsula is based on archival records and newspaper reports of the day.

NEED FOR A SCHOOL

Following the official survey of 1858, settlement of the Saanich Peninsula accelerated, and by 1861, the population of settlers was about 200 (population estimates of the day did not include First Nations).

The first public expression of interest in education appeared in a series of newspaper articles on a proposed "Saanich Town" to be established just south of Bazan Bay.

In July 1861, The Daily Press wrote that school lots were to be donated by prospective developers of the town site. Two months later, Saanich representative John Coles addressed the House of Assembly. He observed that there were plenty of schools in Victoria, and suggested that he could build a school in South Saanich for £60, noting that 15 children lived within a range of a quarter mile.

The House was sufficiently impressed, and voted £60 towards "a school and school purposes" in South Saanich (in 1853, "South Saanich" was the name given to the geographic area that is now the District of Central Saanich).

The House was sufficiently impressed, and voted £60 towards "a school and school purposes" in South Saanich (in 1853, "South Saanich" was the name given to the geographic area that is now the District of Central Saanich).

EARLY SCHOOLING AT ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

Within four months, prayers for a school had been answered. In January 1862, The Daily Press informed its readers that land near William Thomson's farm had been surveyed under the direction of the Bishop of Columbia for a school, adding that "an institution of this kind was greatly needed in the vicinity."

(Newspaper stories of the day vary on whether a school or a church was being built; Church accounts show payment of $25 in February 1862 to William Thomson for land for a church and a parsonage.)

Construction of St. Stephen's Church began in the spring of 1862, and on June 3, the Church was dedicated. The Daily Press observed that a portion of the structure was "parted off to serve as a school, the whole being in one building."

The first teachers were the Rev. Richard Lowe, the minister of St. Stephen's Church, and probably his wife, which was a common practice in new communities at the time.

Was the school simply part of the original church, or a separate building? The answer is complicated by early newspaper accounts, but evidence suggests the school was part of the church as reported in The Daily Press. Later requests for a public school make no reference to a school at the church.

In June 1863, through a letter written by Rev. Lowe, settlers appealed to Rev. Edward Cridge, the Superintendent of Education, for a school.

In September 1863, newly-elected Saanich representative Charles Street seconded a motion in the House of Assembly to form a committee on education since "there was no school provided" in South Saanich for 26 children living within an area of 1 square mile, and he "hoped soon to see a school in his district side by side with the church."

THE FIRST "FREE SCHOOL"

By March 1864, the wishes of the settlers for a free school independent of the Church were satisfied. The diary of William Thomson for March 1864 refers to survey of the school site, approval by the Governor, and delivery of building materials.

However, several months later, there had been little progress: "It appears that they are now holding off from dissatisfaction felt by some at the location chosen," the Daily Evening Express reported, "each one selfishly wishing that the school should have been erected opposite his own front door."

These difficulties were soon overcome, and construction of the school was completed by the end of 1864.

The school was built on four acres of land reportedly taken back from William Thomson, who had not paid for the land according to school records. It was located just north of Mt. Newton Cross Road on the lower slopes of what is now Raven Hill Herb Farm, next to the section line (Thomson Road).

There is uncertainty as to how many buildings were constructed. Local lore states that the school was a single four-room structure, housing both the classroom and teacher, but the observations of school superintendent Alfred Waddington, recorded in his school inspection notebooks, suggest the school and dwelling were distinct structures.

On July 1, 1865, Waddington observed: "The school room and dwelling house were [italics ours] built not quite a year ago and cost the government $750. The schoolroom is 20 ft. by 30."

On August 2, he visited the school again, adding to his initial description: "The school is situated on rising ground some 60 yards from the road, with the dwelling house in front. The teacher at the window in his shirt-sleeves in conversation with another person, hour 3 p.m. Entered the school room by a side door, at the same time as the teacher with his coat on by the front door."

Waddington also offered his views on the state of the new school: "Schoolroom a good one, but without a ceiling and very cold in winter; the boards generally much shrunk, and the building open under the floor. Benches much too high and without backs. Two desks, one on each side of the chimney, badly situated. Teachers dwelling composed of four rooms divided by naked boards much shrunk. No well, the water 1/2 of a mile off. Three backhouses all built together."

TEACHING AT THE SCHOOL

The first teacher at South Saanich School was Charles Newton Young, the son of a British clergyman. Mr. Young, who came to this country from England in 1862 to take part in the Cariboo gold rush, eventually located in the Victoria area. By December 1864, he was in South Saanich, and filed pre-emption papers on 100 acres of land near present-day Saanichton. He began teaching at South Saanich school in January 1865.

We know little of Mr. Young's past, except that he had been a professor of English in the Netherlands for 18 months. He was hired at a salary of $500 per year, with the added incentive of an extra $5 for each student who

Tax implications in giving $

Virtually everyone is being affected in one way or another by the various government cutbacks or corporate downsizing that is so prevalent today.

Although it may not affect us directly, it is becoming increasingly common for parents or grandparents to be called upon to help out a child or grandchild. It is also becoming more common for grown children to rely financially to some extent on their parents. Whenever possible, parents do like to help out but it is something that requires forethought.

Without thinking through the options, there may be unintended circumstances.

An obvious and seemingly easy way to help would be for a parent to simply gift money to the needy child. There are no immediate tax consequences to doing this but there may be estate implications. If there is more than one child and if the intent is to provide equal estate distribution, then it is essential that this "gift" be accounted for.

This could be done by adding a codicil to your will or by having a promissory note signed. By not doing so, it is conceivable that an unequal distribution occur.

If you are uncomfortable with gifting assets, it may be possible to retain control of the funds and position yourself to apply moral suasion if necessary. This could be done by establishing a joint account with the family member.

There may, however, be some tax consequences of this type of arrangement. For example, Revenue Canada may deem that this account was established solely to shift the income to a family member in a lower tax bracket. If that were the case, the income could be attributed back to the source. That aside, it does allow for the transfer of the asset and potentially the income without giving up control. Again, care must be taken that it does not negatively affect your estate plans.

In the event of an estate, joint accounts typically go to the joint account holders before the balance of the estate is divided. Again this may result in an unintentional unequal distribution of your estate.

As is typically the case, there are a number of ways to approach most problems. Thinking the problem through and consulting with the appropriate professional minimizes the risk of unintentional consequences.

TOWN OF SIDNEY NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Notice is hereby given that the Council of the Town of Sidney will hold a Public Hearing in respect of Bylaw 1532 and Bylaw 1533; being the proposed bylaws to amend Official Community Plan Bylaw 1140 and Zoning Bylaw 1300 for the Town of Sidney. All persons who believe their interest in this property is affected by the proposed bylaws will be afforded a reasonable opportunity to be heard or to present written submissions respecting matters contained in the bylaws at a Public Hearing to be held in the Town of Sidney Council Chamber, 2440 Sidney Avenue, Sidney, BC on Monday, April 12, 1999 at 7:30 p.m. Written submissions can be received at the Town Hall prior to the Public Hearing or at the Public Hearing itself.

1. The purpose of Bylaw No. 1532 is to amend Official Community Plan Bylaw No. 1140 by:

- i. Deleting, in its entirety, the Section entitled Commercial Objectives and Policies, and replacing it with an amended Commercial Objectives and Policies section. The significant changes to the Policies section of the bylaw are as follows:
  - a. Adding to Section 1, Commercial-Sub-Area 1.2;
  - b. Deleting existing Section 2 (c): The maximum number of stories a building may contain is 3;
  - c. Deleting existing Section 2 (d): The maximum height for buildings located on lots fronting Beacon Avenue is eleven (11) metres;
  - d. Amending Section 2 (e) as follows:
    - c. In areas designated Commercial-Sub-Area 1.2 in Schedule "B-1", residential development is limited as follows:
      - i. In two, three and four storey buildings, residential development is limited to the second, third and fourth stories; and
      - ii. The maximum number of units per hectare is 90.
- ii. By making the following changes to the Section entitled Commercial Development Permit Guidelines:
  - a. Deleting, in its entirety, Guideline 4;
  - b. Deleting Guideline 13, and adding:
    13. Along Beacon Avenue, roof designs will be integrated into the third or, if applicable, the fourth storey;
  - c. Deleting Guideline 18, and adding:
    18. For each building face, the horizontal dimension of ground floor windows, excluding glass door components, will not exceed 60 percent of the building frontage; and
  - d. Deleting Guideline 21, and adding:
    21. On-site pedestrian walkways and public sidewalks, will be surfaced with interlocking brick; and
- iii. By re-labeling the area shown below from the Commercial (COM-1) and Commercial-Sub-Area 1 (COM-2) designations on the map marked "Schedule B-1" of Bylaw 1140 to the proposed Commercial-Sub-Area 1.2 (COM-1.2);

2. The purpose of Bylaw No. 1533 is to amend Town of Sidney Zoning Bylaw No. 1300 by:

- i. Adding to Section 5.1, Classification of Zones, Schedule III, Commercial the following: Commercial/Residential (C2.2); and
- ii. By creating a new Section 302(b) to Schedule III, Commercial (C) of Zoning Bylaw 1300 known as COMMERCIAL/RESIDENTIAL ZONE (C2.2); and
- iii. By re-labeling the area shown below from Core Commercial (C1) on the map marked "Appendix A" of Bylaw 1300 to the proposed Commercial/Residential Zone (C2.2).

Sectarian study discouraged

Charles Young's enthusiasm for religion attracted the scorn of Superintendent Waddington: "Mr. Young considers grammar useless for farmer's children. The Bible is read before leaving every afternoon."

He later advised Young "to avoid all approaches to Sectarian demonstrations by reading prayers in the Church or otherwise, but that he may very properly assist in the Sunday schools if so inclined."

Mr. Young's abilities as a teacher may have been in doubt. In those days, student examinations were public events, and parents were invited to attend (although their offspring were probably unhappy with this arrangement).

At the August 1866 examinations, Superintendent Waddington observed that the performance of younger students was quite unsatisfactory, describing their reading as "very poor" and recitation (The squirrel) as "worse." Young seems to have had more success with older children, whose recitation (My father at the helm) was described as "Fair."

Later reports by Waddington suggest significant improvement was made by the teacher and his students.

Problems, however, soon arose on the political front. A change in government direction and a shortage of public money meant there was less support for education, and less tolerance for schools with low attendance. As a result, South Saanich school was effectively closed in June 1867; there were 14 children from five pioneer families registered at the time.

Young offered his resignation, and moved on to be Vice-Principal at Collegiate Institute, a fee-paying school in Victoria.

After Young left for Victoria, no classes were taught at the school for some time. Eventually, however, a new teacher arrived — Mrs. Fanny Butler. Miss Fanny Brett became Mrs. Fanny Butler in March 1868, three years after the South Saanich school opened, when she married Captain George Butler who had recently returned to Victoria from the Fraser River gold fields.

Immediately following their marriage, the Butlers set up residence in the school dwelling house at South Saanich. Mrs. Butler taught at the school over a period of four years, from 1868 through June 1872, when the Saanich School District was formed. Fanny had no formal training as a teacher, but had been a governess in England and specialized in teaching piano. During 1868, she taught at South Saanich school without regular pay.

In 1869, the Board of Education, noting that it had a surplus of $94.81 for 1868, adopted a motion to hand the money to Mrs. Butler, as she had taught during 1868 without any remuneration. During her tenure as a teacher at South Saanich, Fanny gave birth to her two eldest children (apparently Mr. Butler was the substitute teacher in her absence). She eventually resigned in June 1872 to spend more time with family; by this time, she was receiving a monthly stipend of $40.

Fanny was not only not the first teacher at South Saanich, neither was she the last. Mr. George Wilson, a graduate of Aberdeen, Scotland, was hired in July 1872, shortly after Butler resigned. He taught at the school until its permanent closure a year later. Mr. Wilson received $60 a month — 50 per cent more than Mrs. Butler.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

As the population grew, pressures mounted to move the South Saanich school to a more central location, and to open a school in North Saanich. In March 1873, the school board approved sites for a new school in North Saanich, as well as a more centrally-located school in South Saanich, on land donated by William Turgoose. The new South Saanich school, located near the East Road, opened in June 1873. Mr. Wilson moved over to the new school, where he taught until April 1874.

There are no records of what happened to the original school house on Mount Newton after the mid-1870s. The North and South Saanich Agricultural Society used the building for its meetings through 1873 and 1874, before moving to a permanent location in Saanich-ton on land purchased from Henry Simpson.

In fact, at the same time the School Board was approving the new South Saanich school site on the Turgoose property in March 1873, the Agricultural Society was asking the government to turn over the old schoolhouse and grounds to the society.

Betty Bell, whose childhood in the Mount Newton Valley is recounted in The Fair Land, does not recall the school and simply assumes that it disappeared sometime in the early 1900s.

CONCLUSION

The grounds of Raven Hill Herb Farm yield no obvious clues to the site of the first public school. We can only imagine a gaggle of pioneer farm children straggling to school along primitive roads, later staring wistfully out the schoolroom windows at the wild beauty surrounding them.

From this region of the valley emerged the heart of a young community: a church, a school, and later, the Saanich Fair. While St. Stephen's Church and the Saanich Fair flourish as icons of our past, continuity between the first little schoolhouse on Mount Newton and modern, computer-based schools has been broken, lost in the myths of time.

Education is a keystone of 20th Century Western culture: Restoration of our educational heritage, therefore, should help us understand who we are, and where we are going in the next millennium.

Note: Today's column is a prelude to Thompson and Morrison's millennium project, beginning in January 2000, which will cover the schools and education on Saanich Peninsula.

Women's hockey tournament a success despite local 0-4 record

Kevin Woodley
Peninsula News Review

Despite posting an 0-4 record at the Western Shield Female Hockey Championships, Saanich coach Bruce Tuck labeled the weekend tournament a big success.

"The tournament went smoothly. Everyone was happy at the end," said Tuck, whose Senior A Saanich Braves squad hosted the four-day event at Panorama and Naden Rinks. The tournament featured the best Midget, Senior A and Senior B women's hockey teams from western Canada.

As for his team's losses during round-robin play, Tuck saw some positive things he will be able to use when working with next year's team.

"It showed us where we fit and it was a good measuring stick," he said.

Sports scores to pass along?
Contact Kevin Woodley
phone: 656-1151
email: penreview@sanati.com

The women improved during each game and consistently played their best hockey during the third periods.

"We never gave up out there," said Tuck. Even during an 11-0 beating from Alberta, the Saanich squad continued to play until the final whistle.

Tuck also saw some areas that need improving before dropping the puck for 1999-2000.

"We still need to work on our speed with the puck - everything just happens a little quicker at this level," he said.

Saanich opened the tournament with a 7-3 loss to Saskatchewan, but the three goals was the most scored by any team against the Saskatchewan team, who eventually lost 2-1 to Alberta in the championship game.

The hosts then lost 5-1 to the B.C. representatives from the Kootneys and 6-1 to Manitoba before the Alberta blow-out.

In Midget (under 18) action - which Tuck said showcased the fastest and strongest hockey at the tournament - Saskatchewan defeated Alberta 3-1 in the final to claim the gold medal. The B.C. team finished with a bronze medal.

The Yukon Territories won the gold medal in Senior B action with a 7-3 victory over Saskatchewan.

SEPARATION, DIVORCE AND TAXES

The high divorce rate causes us to examine the effects that marriage breakdown will have on your tax situation. Please keep in mind that there are definite tax advantages to both spouses if you can arrange things so you will be paying the least possible amount of tax. Some of the most common examples are:

- 1) When dividing assets you and/or your spouse may have the majority of savings in RRSP or RRIF accounts. If the money is transferred from one spouse to the other, make sure it is a direct transfer done as part of a court order or other legal document. If the money goes through you it is deemed to have been withdrawn and is then taxable.
- 2) Claim equivalent to married credit if you are separated, divorced, or otherwise single, and you support a relative who lives with you. Depending on where you live, this credit could save you up to $1,450 in tax.
- 3) Within 11 months of the marriage breakdown you should make an election to have the Child Tax Benefits based only on one income. This will likely cause a substantial increase in these payments.
- 4) If during your marriage you were fortunate enough to own more than one residence (i.e. cottage) you should consider splitting the real estate. This way each residence can qualify as a principal residence and enjoy the exemptions related to home ownership.

Local pair heading to England for soccer tour

Kevin Woodley

Peninsula News Review

For diehard soccer fans in Canada, life can be trying at times.

Opportunities to keep in touch with soccer from England's Premier Division are limited to the occasional (and often at odd hours) game on TSN or SportsNet; poorly lit bars in back alleys; and small, stuck-in-the-back sections of the daily sports section. For those lucky enough to afford it, there are satellite transmissions and Internet radio broadcast available for an often-large subscription fee.

So for Peninsula residents Gerald Henry and Chris Olsen, the chance to see and participate in the English soccer experience is a dream come true.

Henry and Olsen have played soccer in the Victoria area throughout most of their lives. Now, as part of a provincial Native Selects Team, the pair have been selected to travel to the land where chips come on newspaper and not in a bag.

For 14 days they will play, watch and learn from some of the best soccer sides in the world.

"We're going over to try and show off some talent over there," says the 20-year-old Olsen. "We'll be playing against under-20 club and select teams."

With nine games and two training sessions scheduled over the two-week period, there won't be much time left for sight seeing, but Henry's eyes light up when he's asked about the chance to watch live Premier Division soccer.

"Yeah, we're going to take in some sights, but the game will be the best," he says.

The Selects Teams are scheduled to attend a match between world-renowned Manchester United and rival Tottenham. They are also trying to secure seats at a second professional game.

Gerald Henry (left) and Chris Olsen are getting ready to leave for England as part of a Native Selects Team chosen from players throughout the province. The team will take part in a two-week playing tour that includes instructional sessions from Premier Division coaches and watching world-famous Manchester United play a match against Tottenham.

game they love is just one part of the touring experience that organizers hope will provide long term benefit to the players both on and off the field.

"The benefit is in experienced gained," says Chief John Henderson of the Campbell River band.

Henderson, who coaches the team with Scott Harris, has been organizing the trip for over a year and a half. He remembers playing soccer all over the world as a member of provincial and Native teams during his teenage years. And he remembers how the experience helped him to develop as a person and as a leader for his people.

"What I learned at that age really stuck with me," he says. "We want to give these kids that same opportunity."

Getting the opportunity hasn't been easy for Henry and Olsen. They had to travel to Campbell River every second weekend to take part in day-long training sessions with their teammates.

As for the keys to success against competition that will include one professional development team, Henry, a 17-year-old student at Stelly's secondary, said he would stick with the basics.

"We have to be fit. That's the main thing."

DEATHS

KERGAN, Christina M. Kergan, aged 92, died peacefully here March 24, 1999. A six-year resident of Sidney, she moved here from Drumheller, Alberta, where she had lived for more than 45 years. She was predeceased by her husband, James Lawrie Kergan, and her sisters, Mary B. Thomson of Victoria and Drumheller, and Lillian Noble of Nobleford, Alta. She is survived by her son, Robert S. (Budge) Kergan of Calgary, and daughters Mary M. Hill of Courtenay, and Lawrie Peters of Sidney, as well as nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Mrs. Kergan, nee Smeaton, was born in Scotland March 1, 1907, migrating with her family to southern Alberta as a small child. The Smeaton family were longtime residents of Lethbridge. A private family observation was held March 27. Please no flowers. The family wishes to express sincere thanks to the staff of Saanich Peninsula Extended Care Unit for their excellent professional care and, above all, their considerate warmth and concern throughout our mother's stay there.
